not know what the struggle costs is The writer of this well remembers his own sailing againse the waves of fate. He looks back with pride particularly to one period, when he fixed for six months on an average of two dollars and a half per week, rather than abordon what seemed to many as a hopeless enterprise But it succeeded, and was the foundafrom of many blessings which follow-In like nonner, his first enterprise at taining was a terrible disaster. The crops yielded handly the price of the cold used, and the year's labor was compi tely thrown away. The little east court to make manage for the whole sold form it masked, but a spirit of or pendence torbade that. The feelit a with which the writer sat on his list . . remembered. The kind needed is and one infant to provide for, and of the last straw. But the results. orwas a continual study.
